Abstract: Small Industries establishment have great role in industrial development process in Iraq. Modern studies have concentrate upon the importance of Small Industries in developing Iraqi economy. This importance could be displayed through concentrating on some Industry Standards in verifying the reality of industrial activity . Therefore it is necessary to depend on possible number of variables due to lack of data and difficulty in gathering information; accordingly we made the variables depending upon number of industries and employees in the industries , value of the wages , salaries , value of production requirements and value of production .

Through researching , we recognized geographic distribution of used Industry Standards (number of the establishments and employees)(who receive wages or without , total wages), production requirements , besides of total industry products through depending upon categories of standard degrees for each standard and for each governorate from those Industry Standards .

Results showed by Person confident that there is strong relationship between Industry Standards and total production was direct relation , and the standards of production requirements , the strongest between standards of production requirements due to its role and effect in production in small industries .

Results of the research showed though using Lorenz curve of distribution , that the total Industry Standards that used in the research did not take ideal distribution or harmonized due to factors affected these standards in industries , but still products requirements were the closet to ideal form .

Results of the research by using Lorenz context showed that total production does not does not take certain form in distributing if not it is ideal in a value close to zero and if its center not close to Integer , but showed in value(0.54) .
